

Project Creation and Management

If the innovation suite is meant to build codeless application at some point, it lean toward it but only after you have successfully install all the open source packages, downloaded the SDK and created your projects using maven.

The Set-up of the environment is not intuitive, BMC should work at bundling the different parts and make them available as a one click install.

The same logic should apply for the SDK upgrade.

Why don't make it as a docker package? Even better why is not within the Innovation suite sans box?

In addition managing project and dependencies should be done from the UI of the innovation Suite Web Page.
